Laderas de Leonila Blanco 2018
Màquina & Tabla - 75 cl.

Oriol says this wine is his "vin de village" from El Bierzo. The vines are spread out on the red iron-rich hills of Villafranca del Bierzo, on the road to Valdeorras.

Vinification
The bunches of grapes are fermented whole, with natural yeasts. 8 months in big wooden vats, with the development of a yeast veil - the Flor (this is what is called the crianza biologica)

Storage potential
2 to 5 years.

To serve
Our advice is to decant this wine to let it express its aromas, in particular the saltiness of the flor.

Trial analysis
Nice golden colour with some green reflections. The first impression must not frighten you: it is not cork at all, but the flor (like for the Paramos de Nicasia Blanco). After the wine has been given some ait, it offers us a full basket of pit-fruit, exotic flowers, and also some salty notes, typical of Flor wines. Very fresh on the palate, the acidity being the backbone. But the salty notes are never far and come back on the finish line.

Description domain

The general concept of the winery is the struggle between nature and human. Nature is wild and free and after beautiful cycles it always tends to death. The land, the grapes growing, the fermentation of the must and then the ageing are marked by human intervention at the right moment and in the most gentle way to get the best of it and finally have a wine with the expression of the land, the grapes and the human… Màquina means Machine – the human, and tabla means piece of wood – nature. Human interventions mark nature.
